THE BALL FIELD.

The Columbus Sluggers Get Even for Their Decoration Day Defeat,

And Will Try for the Tie Game To-Day-Results Einewhere,

The Columbus club in their second game with the Washingtons presented their California battery, Morris and Carroll, and, as the home boys could not hit Morris's pitching a little bit after the first inning, the visitors won handsomely. Hanna struck out four times, Prince and Mullin three each, while Fennelly, Morgan, and Gladmon each fanned the air once in ineffectual efforts to hit the puzzling delivery of the California "terror." In the first inning the home club opened out as if they meant business, Fennelly leading off with a two bagger and scoring on hits by Humphries and Hawkes, his run being cleanly carned. Prince, Morgan, and Mullin then struck out in succession, leaving Hum-phries and Hawkes glued to their bases. In the second inning Gladmon made a rattling bit to right, the ball going through the fence in front of the boys 10 cent corner, permitting him to score a rather scratchy home run. front of the boys' 10 cent corner, permitting him to score a rather scratchy home run. In the fifth Fennelly hit a liner to left for a base, but Cahill failed to stop the bail, and had to chase it clear to the carriage gate, while Fennelly easily made the circuit of the bases. Run getting for the home team then ceased, none of them thereafter getting as lar as second base. The visitors got in two runs in the fourth one carned, Smith, Field. as far as second base. The visitors got in two runs in the fourth, one carned, Smith, Field, and Mann making base hits and Mullin helping with an error. But the seventh inning settled the game. Up to that time base hits were even, the western sluggers finding Hamill as hard to hit as the home club did Morris. In that inning Carroll led off with a base hit. Kuchne then sent a long Sy to center, which Mullin caught nicely. Morris followed with a switt grounder directly toward Fennelly. Gladmon foolishly made an effort for the ball, but was only able to partially stop it and change its direction enough to prevent Fennelly. Cahill then hit safely, bringing Carroll home. Brown hit a vicious grounder to Hawkes and was fielded out at first, Morris crossing the home plate. Hamill gave Smith his base on balls, and then Field duplicated Gladmon's home run by knocking the ball so that it got under the scate in right center, he scoring a home run and bringing in Cahill and Smith home run by knocking the ball so that it got under the seats in right center, he scoring a home run and bringing in Cabill and Smith before him. In the eighth, after two hands were out, Kuehne made a beautiful hit to left for three bases and scored an carned run on a base hit by Morris. Up to the fatal seventh inning the game looked like a sure victory for Washington, and in all probability would have been so scored but for Giadmon's error of judgment. It is no slight testimony to Hamill's effectiveness as a pitcher that such a powerful batting team as the Columbus nine have proved themselves to be have been able to do batting team as the Columbus nine have proved themselves to be have been able to do so little with his delivery in the two games played. There is not a more promising young pitcher in the country to-day, but he should avoid giving the weak batters of visiting teams bases on balls, something he does too often. Sometimes it is good head-work to send a hard hitter to his base, but the tail end men should be made to hit the ball.

Taken all around, the game was a very fine one to look at. Prince and Hawkes each made beautiful catches, and little Hanns took two skyscrapers in good style at right field. Humphries caught his usual fine game, but made one wild throw to second. Carroll's work behind the bat was ilrst class. as was also Smith's second base play. The two clubs play again to-day, and on Satur-day the W-shingtons cross bats with the Toledos for the first time. A. B. R. B. H. T. B. P. O.

A Remarkable Scene Last Week in the Woods Along the Naugatuck Valley. NEW HAVEN, June 14 .- When some of the inhabitants of Waterbury took their beforebreakfast walk on Friday morning they were autonished to see the foliage of the trees preswonished to see the foliage of the trees pre-senting an autumnal hue. The leaves had changed part of their budding green for a fring of scarlet. All day Friday curiosity seekers flocked to the woods near Waterbury to behold the marvel. When the sun came out in the afternoon most of the leaves grad-ually lost their tings of crimson and became green. In the cooler parts of the woods, where the shade was dense, the touch of frost remained.

On Saturday morning, after the sovere frest of the night before, hundreds of people went to the woods to see whether nature would repeat her frank. The change was oven greater than before. Those leaves which had greater than before. Those leaves which had not regained their green color on Friday afternoon had become entirely bronzed, just as happens on snappy November nights. Nearer the open spaces the hues were brighter. Red and dark brown combined to make part of the trees look as if they had been transplanted from some land of perpetual October. On the outskirts of the woods, where the sun had entirely demolished on Friday afternoon the work the frost had done on Thursday night, the later cold snap had replaced the tinge of red on the borders of the leaves. In several other parts of the Naugatuck tinge of red on the borders of the leaves.

In several other parts of the Naugatuck valley the frost had a like effect, only not as strongly marked as near Waterbury. The people are trying to find some way of preserving specimens of the phenomenal leaves. James L. Isenberg, Smith T. Fisher, Charles W. Stewart, and several others have some of them, whose color, they hope, will remain. One man is experimenting with leaves from the same woods, in an ice house, and he thinks that by managing the temperature and moisture aright he can produce the same effect at pleasure.
